

PROPOSED COUNCIL STUDY ISSUEFor Calendar Year: 2004Continuing ☐New ☒Previous Year (below line/defer) ☐Issue: Provide for Greater Enforcement of Art in Private Development RequirementsLead Department: Parks and RecreationGeneral Plan Element or Sub-Element: Arts Sub-Element1. What are the key elements of the issue? What precipitated it?

Earlier in the year staff reported to the Arts Commission a situation involving missing (stolen) artwork that was required through the City's Art In Private Development (AIPD) program. Commissioners raised concern regarding the property owner's responsibility for replacing the artwork, especially after discovering the property owner had recovered some of the artwork's cost from their insurance. While there is a requirement that the artwork be maintained by the property owner after it's installation, the policy states that no piece of required artwork may be removed, except for maintenance or repair. There is nothing in the current AIPD policy requiring continued provision of artwork that specifically calls for its replacement regardless of the reason(s) it was removed. In another situation, the Commission had expressed concern that security fencing installed after September 11, 2001 at a different site prevented the public from entering the premises and approaching the required artwork. As a result of the security fencing, the Commission felt the artwork was less accessible to the general public. While the current policy does require that art in private development be publicly visible, it does not require the artwork to be physically accessible to the general public.

To address these concerns, Arts Commission Chair Dane Beezley requested this study issue to:

1. Develop legal and enforceable standards to ensure continued public visibility and access to art installed as a requirement of the Art In Private Development program, and;
2. Develop legal and enforceable requirements for the continued maintenance of artwork provided by the AIPD program with a provision for monetary recovery (i.e. insurance reimbursement) for damaged or stolen art to be used to either replace the artwork or be deposited into the City's art in-lieu fund as deemed fit by the City on a case by case basis.
